Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: Sally blogs about her new job opportunity.

Learning Outcome

Accurately use information about people's jobs and places of work in communicative situations.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about jobs and work.
- I can use and pronounce the sounds: OI and OY.
- I can identify key information in a short audio

Ask your partner:

- Do you have or did you have a job?
What is it?
- How did you feel on your first day?
- Were you nervous? Excited?

Let's Explore!

Listen to Sally read her blog about her new job. What an incredible opportunity to get ahead in her career!

* To "get ahead" means to advance at work, at school, or life in general.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

I have some exciting news! I am officially employed as Cambridge Life's newest freelancer. I was invited to join the magazine publication last week. This is a fantastic opportunity for me to prove myself as a serious writer. Honestly, I'm nervous. This is a big change from sharing my experiences online.

Freelance writing is not a permanent, salaried position. Hopefully, they will recognize my hard work and determination and change their minds in the future. It would be nice to have some work stability. I hope to be a voice for my age group when it comes to travel, interests and current events. My experience in blogging from different parts of the world should come in handy. It gives me a lot of joy to share my experiences with others.

Do you think working as a freelancer is a good idea?

Did I make the right choice?

Send me your thoughts!

Sal.

Let's Practice!

Enjoy her voice ... It's time to practice the OY and OI sound!

Learning Points

The oy and the oi sound

The oy or oi sound in a word is called a diphthong. A diphthong is two vowel sounds in one syllable.

The diphthong oi and oy make the “oy” sound as in boy.

See the chart below for examples. Read the words aloud.

OY	OI
boy	boil
enjoy	voice
employ	noise
annoy	coin
destroy	join

Examples:

- I was invited to join the magazine publication last week.
- Did I make the right choice?
- I find a lot of joy when I share my experiences with others.
