Let's Start!

Writing Spot: Sally asks a senior editor if he can give her some tips.

Learning Outcome

Describe characteristics of different people and their jobs.

Ask your partner:

- How often do you read magazines?
- What kind of magazine do you like? Why?
- Do you read the articles, advertisements? Look at the images?

Can Do Statements

- I can write a short article.
- I can talk about hypothetical actions and effects in the future.
- I can write about people's appearance and personality.

Let's Explore!

Sally gets some great tips and pointers from the senior editor about how to write articles.

* A "pointer" is a helpful suggestion or piece of advice.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Sally: Thank you for seeing me.

Charles: No problem, Sally. I heard you are quite ambitious. What would you like to talk about?

Sally: I am used to blogging. Could you give me some advice on how to write magazine articles?

Charles: Writing an article takes time, research and planning.

Sally: I see. How do I start? What steps should I take?

Charles: First, choose a topic that interests you. Then, do your research. If you don't do your research, your information will not be accurate.

Sally: OK, I need to become a more organized person.

Charles: Then, it is essential that you know who you are writing for. If you don't think about your audience you won't engage them.

Sally: I see. I need to think about my readers ... their wants, needs, and interests.

Charles: Remember, never hand in a rough draft. If you don't proofread your work, you will not be taken seriously as a writer.

Sally: Thank you for being so helpful!

Let's Practice!

The senior editor of the magazine explains what will happen if Sally doesn't organize her work.

Instructions: Use the words from the Word Bank to correctly complete the sentences.

Learning Points

The First Conditional

You can use the first conditional to talk about actions and situations in the future.

There are two parts to the sentence.

One part is the condition. The other part is the result.

Form:

If + subject + Simple Present tense + subject + will/won't

You use a comma after the condition in this form. You can flip the two parts of the sentence so that the result comes first. It can be in interrogative form.

Form:

Will/Won't + subject + if + subject + Simple Present tense ?

Condition	Result
If you don't think about your audience,	you won't engage them.

Learning Points

A Short Article

Steps to writing an article.

STEP 1: Choose your topic

Select a topic that interests you. Think about your topic over a period of time. Write a rough draft with everything you can think of. A rough draft is the first stage in the writing process. It is the stage where you add all your ideas together.

STEP 2: ADDRESS YOUR AUDIENCE'S NEEDS.

Think about your audience and how you can write the article to answer their questions.

STEP 3 : DO YOUR RESEARCH

Research is very important. Include:

- Definitions
- Quotes
- Examples

Collect all the important information you need.

STEP 4: TIGHTEN YOUR DRAFT.

Put your rough draft and your research together. Does the information in your article blend together? Proofread your work.

STEP 5

Read the article to a friend.

Does your article:

- Include all the information?
- Is it in logical order?

Ensure that the article is checked for spelling, grammar and punctuation errors.
